Protection against pesky pests...

With the recent erratic weather and seasonal pests in their prime, gardeners have been turning to netting to protect their precious crops from being devoured by pests or damaged by the weather.

“My Kitchen Garden thrives at this time of year using our insect-mesh protection netting and crop protection hoops over my Harrod Horticultural raised beds, to stop the pests eating all my crops. I love to cook using organic ingredients from my garden and it’s so frustrating when the pests have beaten you to the harvest” says Stephanie Harrod, Director of Harrod Horticultural

Insect-mesh protection netting keeps carrot fly, cabbage root fly, caterpillars, birds and other insects at bay while also protecting crops against frost, heavy rain, the recent gale force winds and hail damage. Using insect-mesh protection netting with crop protection hoops allows plants to grow healthily in 20% shade while air and water can flow freely around the area. The netting is made from 100% polyethylene so is also light weight enough to lay directly over crops.

Harrod Horticultural specialise in providing mail order garden netting and this particular type of netting is currently flying off the shelves. The insect-mesh protection netting is equivalent in function to Enviromesh but is higher quality and is up to 30% lower in price than some Enviromesh distributors. The netting is available in 2.1, 2.6 and 3 metres with prices from £2.50 per metre.

“The high quality material, available in a range of sizes and cut to order, makes insect-mesh protection netting exceptional value for money and an essential requirement for anyone with a kitchen garden”, says Stephanie.
